The following old poem has been sent to us as a bit of interesting verse. Two very different sentiments are obtained by first reading it through as printed and then reading each verse in the order of lines 1-3-2-4.

The man must lead a happy life
Who is directed by his wife,
Who's freed from matrimonial chains
Is sure to suffer from his pains.

Adam of old could find no peace
Until he saw a woman's face.
When Eve was given for a mate
Adam was in a happy state.

In all the female hearts appear
Truth telling of a heart sincere;
Hypocrisy, deceit and pride
Ne'er known in woman to reside.

What tongue is able to unfold
The worth in woman we behold
The falsehood that in woman dwell
Is almost imperceptible.

Fooled be the foolish man I say
Who will not yield to woman's sway;
Who changes from his singleness
Is sure of perfect blessedness.

Roger's "Model."

Grand Rapids papers of early June bring the news of the death of Pe-na-sa, chief of the Muskegons, the only aged Indian I ever met. Friends of our TOWNSMAN "Roger" may like to hear of the old man who posed for the "materialization" of our familiar. Pe-na-sa was between 110 and 115 years of age, according to tribal lore and his own memory of past events. Born about 1780, and at the time of the great confederation of North-west tribes under Tecumseh, probably about thirty years old, he must have been familiar with many tragedies like one I have just clipped from a local paper. A geologist prospecting in Jackson Co., Mich., picked up from a stream a marked stone, rudely cut by some blunt instrument, and with the aid of a microscope he deciphered part of the inscription: "Samuel Bernet: taken by the Indians near Sandusky: never expect to reach that place (Fort Stephenson on the Bay). If my friends I am to be burned. April 16, 1809."

Since 1807, when British war-ships were ordered by Jefferson out of our waters, British agents had been stirring our North-west Indians against Americans. The British Press had been boasting that "the United States couldn't be kicked into a war," and were patting New England on its prudent commercial back because of its secret sympathy (they "got left," however). Pe-na-sa was a full-grown war chief when that most desperate of all Indian fights, at Tippecanoe, came off, when Mackinaw and Detroit fell into British hands again. His tribe belonged to the Chippewas, along the South shore of Lake Michigan. Ohio had been a state since 1802, but the territory of the North-west, to which Michigan belonged, seemed lost till Harrison recovered it, and in October 1813, leaving Tecumseh dead on the Thames bank, sent the confederacy flying north and west, so broken that even Black Hawk in 1830 could not spur them to conquest. A few Chippewa families of the swarming thousands who emigrated to the Osage Hills remained behind on reservations, and have given no trouble, being mostly peaceable, industrious Methodists, except when the white man's whiskey arouses the old fury.

Pe-na-sa was baptized Joseph and called by the lumbermen Jo Penasee. He lived in the forest apart from the reservation—a special privilege—in a wigwam near his white friends, and there, on his own land, he was buried beside his wife and kin, in the presence of a large number of the white residents, who came to pay this last tribute of respect. He once owned a fine broad sweep of miles of forest lands, stocked with noble game, cut by streams full of the finest fish. Many years ago he sold out to D. M. Blodgett, one of the most successful of our lumber millionaires, and it saddened the old chief to see the trees, deer, and grayling vanishing together. About the time of the transfer, Mr. Blodgett wandered one day from camp and was gone three days, living, because he was only a white man, on roots and berries till he sank down exhausted. Scores of sharp-eyed woodsmen searched without a trace. Pe-na-sa was called upon, "Me find him pretty queek." Starting out with the long lope peculiar to the Muskegon men, he noticed broken twigs and bruised soil that all had overlooked, and in a few hours appeared at the camp "backing in" the starved capitalist, and laying him gently down, "Heem pretty seek fella," turned quietly away home. After recovery the white gentleman called on the red gentleman, and presented him with a team of ponies and a handsome gold watch and chain that Pe-na-sa valued beyond all else.

I first met him, in 1871 in my brother-in-law Raymond's supply store. Indians and whiskey tragedies were abundant, and if there was time I could give you Pe-na-sa's domestic history, which was the saddest either white or red man ever went through. But he was a true believer and lived patiently and humbly, and died peacefully, comforted by the Great Spirit. I can see his little supple trim figure clad in moccasins, black trousers, the cleanest of white shirts, the soft felt with the cockade of his rank, and in the severest weather the three-cornered folded drapery of the striped government shawl. I never saw him on a pony but once. He was a great walker and brought us at early daybreak ten quarts of raspberries without a "mash" over the worst swamps in the country, and the daintiest fish dressed for cooking wrapped in fragrant leaves. He would come into the store with the word, "Where Raymun fella Tobac," light his pipe, and sit all day till the "boss" appeared. Just at closing up time he would approach the rude counter for "wentago," which once took me a good half-hour of pantomime to discover was "eendigo," as he afterwards spoke it with a little giggle. He liked to watch my rather rapid movements about the place and told the "boss" once that I would "make good squaw, hang bear meat." His old squaw "too fat, no more hang bear meat." It was rather funny that my old admirer should have hit on my dexterity of movement the one valuable "point" remarked upon by my appreciative white brothers. If I had only known then how old he was and what he had seen! But I had no language in common with him, and he was very reticent about the Indians' matters.

Mr. Blodgett as long as Jo lived sent regularly to see if he lacked for anything, and the whole story of Pe-na-sa's closing years gives one of the pleasantest pictures of what must be in time the relation between the red and white man

The Public School System.

Some of the more recent progressive steps taken where the schools are at their best are:

1. The substitution of the town system for the old district system, whereby the town is made the unit in its school affairs as in all its other interests. The wisdom of this change is now beyond question on the part of all thinking men.

2. The improvements made in the school accommodations. Special attention is now given to proper lighting, ventilation, and sanitary arrangement. Schoolhouse furniture combines comfort and beauty.

3. The provision for furnishing to all pupilt textbooks and supplies.

4. A recognition of the value and the hearty support accorded state normal and city training schools, and the rapid multiplicalion of pedagogical books and educational journals.

5. The growing sentiment in favor of skilled supervision.

6. The broadening scope of what constitutes a good education. The characteristics of an intellectual education are development and power, rather than knowledge and information; a training of all the mental faculties rather than memory alone; a constant appeal to intelligence and thought, even with little folks; while physical culture and character-building receive due attention in our best schools.

A change in our ideas of what constitutes an education necessitates a change in the curriculum—additions and eliminations—and a change in the methods of teaching. In primary work especially has there been a revolution within the last 10 or 15 years. A study of the child has led to a more rational method in his instruction. The principles underlying the kindergarten have materially influenced the work of primary schools.

Too many criticisms on the management and work of the schools are founded on insufficient knowledge of what is being accomplished. Frequent school visitation during regular sessions will not only give the people correct impressions of what is being attempted, but will prove an inspiration to the pupils and an encouragement to the teacher.—A. W. Edson, Agent Mass. Board of Education, in Journal of Education.

The Farmer and the Weather Bureau.

In the past, good reasons have rendered it impossible to make the weather service of very great value to the farmer. In the main its work has been the preparation of the familiar predictions, which have been made for large areas. At present the areas selected are single States. The predictions are made by an officer in Washington to whom observations are reported from a large number of stations situated in various parts of the country. He glances over these reports, noting the places where rain has fallen, and the network of temperatures and barometric pressure; sees how the conditions have been changing since the last predictions have been made; and, perhaps with scarcely time to weigh the reasons for his conclusions, makes up his predictions in regard to the weather of the immediate future. He can give but a very small amount of time—perhaps two minutes—to each State.

The work of forecasting the weather must be divided, and, in addition to the general predictions from Washington, we must have local predictions prepared by officers in charge of small districts. Such officers have already been appointed by the Secretary of Agrtculture, and their number will doubtless be increased when the usefulness of their work is shown. This, however, cannot be fully demonstrated until, by the cheapening of the telegraph and telephone service, and by the extension of free mail delivery, effective means are found for carrying the predictions to the farmer in time for his use. The present work of the local observers is of service in perfecting their methods, and their forecasts are of great usefulness to the farmers who can be reached; but their full value can never be realized until it is possible to put them promptly into the hands of all the farmers who can use them.—July Century.

Teaching Geography.

John Van Orsten of Detroit is at the Lindell. He tells of a novel method of teaching geography and kindred studies which has been introduced into the Detroit public schools by a lady teacher. "This lady a few years ago," said Mr. Van Orsten, "conceived the idea of establishing a system of correspondence between the pupils of her grade and children of similar ages, not only in other parts of the United States, but also in foreign countries. The idea was taken up with great zest by the children, and has become not only a source of amusement but also a valuable information. The children naturally became interested in the surroundings of their correspondents, and it requires but little direction on the part of their teacher to get them to inquire as to the climate, commercial products, leading industries, methods and objects of studies in the schools, etc. I saw some of these letters some time since. One of them, from Syracuse, N.Y., told about the salt industry there and about the Onondago Indians, a tribe of whom still live and hold property in common on a reservation near Syracuse. There were two letters from girls, 14 or 15 years old, living in Australia. They described the climate, told about their schools and how they spent the vacation. They were well written and full of information even to a grown person. There were also similar letters from children in Germany, and one from a teacher in Sweden who could write in English."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

FRIDAY, JULY 8, 1892.

The award of the contract for the Abbott Village schoolhouse to the architect seems to insure the construction of the building by out-of-town builders, as we had feared. We do not know who are to be the sub-contractors for the building, but it is understood that the committee is assured that the building shall be built in a perfectly satisfactory manner. To get what is commonly supposed to represent $12,000 for $8,000 is something not often accomplished by a town, and such a feat on this occasion will be watched with a good deal of interest on the part of our citizens.

We understand that no time limit was placed in the contract, and no bonds given by the contractor.

An experienced and skilful engineer laid out our Andover system of waterworks in accordance with grades and levels already established, or established by himself. Less than three years have elapsed and the Superintendent of waterworks has already been obliged to put in several new hydrants on Main Street, to replace those covered up by the raised grade.

When the young men of the town who delight to usher in the Fourth of July by a bonfire, so far forget themselves as to assume that everything is common property, and straightforth take anything that they can lay hands to that will burn, it is high time the authorities interfered. Lawlessness never went so far as it did last Monday morning, and the fact that the young men are ready to settle, and will be obliged to do so at quite an expense, may be all the punishment that is best, but we are inclined to think that another kind of punishment might have made the lesson one a little more likely to be remembered, and have afforded the property owners a little securer protection in the future.

Look Out for a Swindler.

Quite a bold swindling operation was carried out in town yesterday and though fortunately there was not much loss of money, yet it might have been more, and it only shows that one cannot be too careful to whom he pays money, especially when the person presenting the bill is a stranger. Sometime yesterday afternoon a man drove up to the home of Frank B. Jenkins, on Chestnut St., and called for Mrs. Jenkins. He said that he had been sent by Mr. Jenkins to get five dollars which was due on a package he had left at the Tyer Rubber factory for Mr. Jenkins. At the same time he presented a bill which read as follows:

Mr. Frank Jenkins.

Please pay Mr. Kelley the balance due on the package I send with him.

Total,	$10.75
Cash,	5.75
	5.00

at the Tyer Rubber works.
Rec'd Payment,
One Price House,
Lawrence,
Mass.

The case as presented apparently seemed straight to Mrs. Jenkins and she paid him five dollars, while he drove rapidly away to try and land another victim.

He next called at the home of Alfred Abbott, on Punchard Avenue, where Henry Ring, another employee of the Tyer Rubber Company boards. The swindler tried another tack here, telling Mr. Abbott that he had come to get five dollars, with which to liberate Mr. Ring, who he said, had been arrested and locked up. But Mr. Abbott was not so easily persuaded upon to part with his money and told the man he would put on his coat, go with him and see what was the trouble This course of action was not what the smooth tongue visitor desired and seeing that his scheme would not work here, got into his wagon and drove rapidly away. This was the last seen or heard of him.

The case was reported to Chief of Police Cheever, who immediately started to investigate. The only clue he had was the bill which was given Mrs. Jenkins. Neither she nor Mr. Abbott could give much of a description of the man or his team. From what they saw, it is thought he was a man about 5 feet 10 inches tall and wore a brownish suit. His turnout consisted of a horse and wagon and that is all that could be learned.

Dairy Maids' Supper.

The dairy maids' supper and entertainment in the Town Hall, last Friday night, was a complete success. The committee of the Woman's Relief Corps, under whose charge the affair was conducted, were very fortunate in securing such a good thing as the Dairy Maids' Cantata to entertain those who attended, and there was quite a large audience. The life of the dairy maid was pictured out in song in an excellent manner, the chorus singing being especially good. There were also several good solos and duetts. Perhaps the feature of the evening was the dairy maids' drill, performed by the lady members of the chorus under command of Capt. J. Percy Roberts of the Punchard Cadets. Milking stools took the place of the regulation guns. The different movements were executed very proficiently. Another good thing was the "milk can quintette," performed by five young men, cans, chalk, and pump being well represented by the costumes. All the members of the chorus were also costumed very appropriately, which added much to the scene.

The chorus was in charge of Conductor Geo. W. Stover, and Charles Eames presided at the piano. The members of the chorus were: Mrs. C. B. Jenkins, Marion and Laura Chandler, Mrs. Keeland, Mrs. W. B. Morse, Mrs. R. M. Findley, Mrs. Harris, Misses Jessie Green and Clara Bell, Miss Mears and Miss Farnum; Masters Remington, Scott, Lamont, Watson, Trow, Bell, Roberts, May, Nims, John Noyes.

After this delightful entertainment strawberries, ice cream, and cake were enjoyed, the chorus ladies serving with milking stools as waiters. The stools were afterward sold at auction and brought good prices. Quite a good sum was realized and will be a good start for the amount the Corps would like to raise to help send Post 99 to Washington.

Are they Lawrence Hoodlums?

Mr. Editor:

If our local police would have a little moral courage and make short work with some of the noisy, unescorted, inelegant young women from our neighbor city that patronize the band concerts, it would save the foolish young men of both towns a great deal of trouble. In seeking congenial companionship, they annoy quiet music-lovers who have hitherto been safe from such interference by peering at and following about after those who are attending strictly to their own business. This open air meeting has been one that the wives and daughters of our townsmen have always felt free to enjoy without hindrance and we call on the officers appointed by these citizens to attend to their duties without shirking. The class visiting us have common sense and do not need more than one lesson to learn what is due us who enjoy these first class concerts.

CHAPERON.

Fourth of July.

The rain on Sunday night somewhat put a damper on the ardor of the young America of our town, but, as near midnight the storm cleared off and the stars came out bright, they arose to the occasion and as soon as the clock struck twelve several church and other bells pealed forth the notes of Independence Day in a manner not calculated to induce sleep to those who sought quiet and rest. In the meantime, a large bon-fire as usual was started in Elm Square which illuminated the whole centre of the town for several hours. Some business places in anticipation of this had set out material where it would be within easy reach of the multitude of young people who are only too eager to load themselves down with anything to put on a Fourth of July bon-fire. Cannons, fishhorns, etc., also added to the general confusion.

The day was one of the most perfect that ever dawned upon a Fourth of July, and a larger part of our people betook themselves to surrounding places and the town itself was more quiet than on a Sunday. The electric cars were crowded all day long and also in the evening.

The Cricket Club had a gala time which is noticed fully elsewhere, and this was about the only thing going on in town. At night there were a few private displays of fire-works, and so the 116th anniversary of our independence passed in Andover.

Everybody Likes It.

Everyone who has used the new soap powder, "Purifine," speaks in the highest praise of it. It cleans and whitens the clothes with little rubbing and without injury to the most delicate fabric.

"'Tis Brownie, the TOWNSMAN fiend," was the cry as the noisy band of Fourth of July celebraters piled high the wagons and boxes and barrels on their Elm Square fire, as out of one tight little keg there flew for his life your own humble servant. Thus ran the tale of Brownie as he came into the office this morning, full of life as ever, and evidently good for many more "glorious Fourths." "But I'll tell you," he continued, "they are after me pretty hard. I got away from the fire with difficulty and felt that I must have a little more sleep before daybreak for I had a big day's work before me. No room in the Police Station, none in the Post Office, and after a little hesitation I ventured into the Engine House Alas! they still had great love for me there, as the two pails of water on my luckless head well proved, and again I was out in the cold."

"Talk of a thankless world," he went on, "the very men whose greatness comes alone from the record I have made of their lives are the most eager to destroy me. Oh 'tis too bad," he murmured "to believe that he whose power I have heralded, whose ownership of this whole town (not including the Post Office) I have recognized, and whose greatness I have so often paid tribute to, should order me smothered in a haycock! 'Tis hard to think that that 'sweet singer of Is—beg pardon, of the West,' who was only discovered when the big west woods were cut down a few years ago should by his sudden turning from a poor farmer into an eminent engineer so far forget the chronicler of his ability as to try to bury him in a ditch! Aye, 'tis hard that dozens of this town's famed men, who owe their fame to me, should by fire, by flood, by smothering, by burying, by police discipline, or by starving, try to crush out the life of a poor little, hard-working Brownie like me!"

"Brownie," we said, "you are discovered! not like the man who had the woods cut down around him, but actually your esteemed friends have discovered your identity, or they think they have."

"All right," he answered, "but I'll wager a balloon against a road scraper that no person in Andover can call me by the right name," and if the guesses we have heard are as near as can be made, we guess he'd win the road scraper.

"Well," said Brownie, "I did enjoy that last Republican Club meeting, and it was worth a good deal to see the crowd(?) that was there, and what enthusiasm! But still you had all kinds if there wasn't but one of a kind. You had the 'G.A.R.,' 'Protection,' 'Mugwump,' 'Enthusiast,' 'Cold Blood,' 'Statistics,' and let me see, three more wasn't it? I tell you this is a tremendous hot-weather political town!"

Weather Notes.

June is such an uncertain month that I did not like to foretell the weather, but after urging by a friend who enjoys the mistakes as well as the hits, I put in what I thought we should get. The order of exercises was not followed but if you look back you will see that we had all the kinds of weather ordered only shaken up a little. A storm at this date (July 5) is coming, and will be here before the issue of this paper—and a peculiar one. July will be a month of violent storms. Look at 11 o'clock in the south for the occultation of Mars and the moon, on the night of July 11, a rare sight, if the jealousy of Venus and Mercury don't prevent the curtain rising in time for the show. Whether a comet's tail or auroral mists, we have some very tantalizing obscurity over our summer stars which are now very beautiful on the rare clear nights.

Republican Club.

The Republican Club evidently intends that it shall not be called a dead thing during the coming campaign, or at least so it seemed from the sentiment of the meeting held last Friday night in the rooms over Valpey's meat market. It was well attended, and those present were very enthusiastic for doing good work in the campaign. The main object, however, of this meeting was to take some active steps toward organizing anew. Many of the officers who had been elected were unable to serve and so it was thought best to elect a new set of officers. J. A. Smart presided and Samuel Ward was chosen secretary pro tem. After a few opening remarks by President Smart it was voted to appoint a committee of five, who should make up a list of new officers, seeing each one personally to find out if he would serve, and also to make inquiries about the meeting quarters and report at the next meeting, which will be held in the same rooms next Monday night at 7.30 o'clock. Although this meeting was well attended, there should be a good many more present at the next to hear the important report of the committee, and to see that the club starts out aright.

Does Protection Protect?

Certainly, in one instance, it does. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the great protection against the cancers of impure blood, and it will cure or prevent all diseases of this class. It has well won its name of the best blood purifier.

Obituary.

Florence W. Gould, only child of Milo H. Gould, superintendent of the Almshouse, died quite suddenly last Sunday afternoon of congestion of the brain. She complained of feeling ill last Wednesday but was out Friday. Sunday morning, however, her illness became serious and though every attention was given her she passed away during the afternoon. Deceased was almost seven years old, and was loved by all who knew her. The bereaved family has the sympathy of a large number of friends in their affliction. Funeral services were held at the Almshouse Tuesday afternoon, Rev. F. A. Wilson of the Free Church officiating. Interment at Spring Grove Cemetery.

Frye Village.

Robert Lindsay was hurt quite severely in the back, Monday, while lifting rocks for Alfred Playdon, the crowbar giving way.

Thomas Kydd, wife, and daughter Jessie spent Saturday, Sunday, and Monday in Newburyport.

John L. Morrison and family of Merrimac have been spending this week with relatives in the village.

Miss Charlotte McRae of Saratoga is visiting at the home of Miss Agnes Smith.

The friends and acquaintances of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Smith, who until recently resided in this village, have been grieved to learn of the death of their little son, who died Monday after an illness of a few hours of cholera infantum.

Harry Playdon was a fortunate young man last Saturday night, when a party of friends visited him at his home and gave him lots of pretty presents. His own parents also remembered his blossoming into manhood by the present of a silver watch and chain. Of course it is now surmised that Harry had reached his twenty-first birthday, and right royally did all present enjoy this occasion in different forms of amusement.

As in the rest of the town this village was a pretty quiet place on the Fourth of July. During the night before, however, the youth of the village celebrated after 12 o'clock in a pretty lively manner. As in former years, the boys collected money for powder to use in the village cannon, and right well did she speak out during the night. Horns and other things also added to the general racket. A bonfire was also lighted in the centre. It was made up of tar barrels, coverings of wells belonging to the mill houses, gates, outbuildings, etc. The village people are, it is thought, willing to have the boys enjoy this occasion and do not make much complaint, but when it comes to destroying property, as was done Sunday night, it is treading too heavily on good nature, as well as breaking a well-known law and laying onesself liable to punishment. Such acts are uncalled for. The offenders are known but we understand that now they think better of it and are inclined to make satisfactory settlement with the parties whose property was destroyed.

Cricket.

While Andover was very quiet as a whole on the Fourth of July, the cricketers and their friends were enjoying a good time on their grounds. An all day game was played with the Cambridge team, and the Andovers gave their city visitors a good drubbing, making 26 more runs in one inning than their opponents made in two. The home team batted first and by good work of Saunders, Low, Bruce, and Ripley ran up a score of 110. The visitors were quickly retired for 36 runs and being 75 behind they immediately began another inning, but were able to score only 48 more, thus being defeated by an inning and 26 runs. In the evening a large number witnessed a pretty display of fireworks given by the club, and many enjoyed dancing on the green.

The Craighead & Kintz Co. have received the contract for building the machines for the Essex Printing Telegraph Co., of New York. These machines consist of a transmitter similar to a typewriter in appearance and a receiver which prints the message automatically just as written and in the usual typewritten characters. The same message may be taken on an indefinite number of receivers and a copy of the message is kept at the sending point. It is an ingenious system and lines are now working between various points.

The Fourth was celebrated in pretty good style particularly the first part of it. The noise commenced just at midnight and was kept up until sunrise. The church bells were rung steadily during that time and a band of depraved young men and boys marched the streets with horns and guns headed by part of the drum corps making the night hideous and sleep impossible. It is to be hoped that the participants may be arrested and fined for their unwarranted conduct. Several bonfires were lighted during the night. Almost everyone went to Lawrence to see the features there and in the evening a barge load of twenty-seven young people went to Lowell to see the fireworks.

A FIERCE CONFLICT.

STRIKERS AND PINKERTON MEN ENGAGE IN BATTLE.

Both Sides Suffer Greatly Through the Terrible Collision—Strikers Train a Cannon on Their Hated Foes.

PITTSBURG, July 7.—Pittsburg has had another experience with labor riots, and this time, as during the fearful scenes which were witnessed during the railroad riots of 1877, blood has been shed, life jeopardized and valuable property placed in danger. This time there was no destruction of property, but the mob was thoroughly well organized, well disciplined and had efficient officers at the head to conduct the operations. The force embraced all the men employed in the extensive plants of the Carnegie Iron and Steel company at Homestead, eight miles east of Pittsburg, and a battle which, for bloodthirstiness and boldness of execution, has not been excelled in actual warfare, waged from 4 o' lock yesterday morning until 5 o'clock in the afternoon, and only ceased when the force of Pinkertons brought to the place to suppress the strike unconditionally surrendered, leaving their arms in the barges in which they had been transported to the works.

The detectives had been rendezvoused some five or six miles below the city on the Ohio river, at which point two model barges had been prepared for them. The barges were of the best build and were used in shipping iron rails down the river from the Carnegie mills at Braddock. The holds were fitted up with bunks, cooking arrangements and other accommodations, and as an extra precaution were lined with heavy steel plates on the inside, while the whole back deck was protected in a similar manner.

It was the intention that the men should reach the works about 3 o'clock yesterday morning, but the guards which were on duty along the river got word of the threatened invasion of the Pinkerton men and prepared to receive them. The barges were towed up the river by a towboat, but long before the men reached Homestead thousands of strikers had gathered on the banks of the river ready to give them a warm welcome. When the boats attempted to land the workmen broke through the fence surrounding the mill, and entrenching themselves behind piles of steel billets, prepared to resist the landing of the detectives.

By 4 o'clock in the morning an effort was made to land the detectives, but the strikers met them, and a both sides exchanging a volley of shots. The detectives were all armed with Winchester rifles, but at the point where the attempt to land was made there was a steep embankment, and they were compelled to go in single file, and were soon driven back to the boats by the steady fire from the shore. The noise of the battle spread about the borough like wildfire, and thousands of men, women and children thronged to the river bank to witness the fight in progress. The Pinkerton men were determined to land, and they poured volley after volley into the ranks of the strikers, many of whom were stricken down by the bullets, some of them being fatally injured and others killed outright.

Fierce Battle Was Precipitated,

As soon as day broke the strikers secured a small brass ten-pound cannon and planted it within a steel billet embrasure so as to command the barges which were moored at the bank of the river. At the same time a force of more than 1000 men took up a position on the opposite side of the river and also planted a cannon, which they protected with a breastwork of railroad ties.

The fire from both sides was kept up, the barges having been pierced along the sides. Shortly before 9 o'clock the cannon were trained on the boats, and for several hours an awful bombardment was kept up. The stout oaken timbers forming the sides of the boat were splintered, but the heavy steel plates on the inside prevented the balls from penetrating the interior. Many of the strikers, however, were expert marksmen, and they sent shot after shot into the portholes in the boats, and inflicting terrible injury on the imprisoned men.

When an inspection of the boats was made it was found that at least seven of the Pinkerton men had been killed and twenty or thirty wounded, many of them so badly that they will die. As they were brought from the boat they presented a terrible appearance. Many were besmeared with blood, while all of them showed signs of exhaustion from the long confinement in the close quarters between decks.

The most shocking and dastardly deeds, however, were committed while the prisoners were being escorted through the streets by the guards appointed by the strikers. An angry mob lined the streets on both sides. As the men passed by, each in charge of two deputies, the mill men and their friends kicked them and threw some of them down. The unfortunate detectives begged for mercy. Some of them had pistol shot wounds in their heads and three were seen that

Had Their Eyes Shot Out.

Several were shot in the shoulders, arms and legs, and could scarcely limp along. Blood was running in streams down their shirts and they fairly yelled with pain.

Fully thirty injured men were taken to the town hall. One of them had his eye punched out by an umbrella in the hands of a woman. Sand was thrown in their eyes and they were hit with clubs and other missiles. Many were knocked down with clubs, trampled upon and some were too weak to walk when they were started for the town hall. The mill men used the stocks of their rifles and struck the detectives over the head and shoulders, inflicting serious, and in some cases, perhaps fatal injuries.

The day was one that will be remembered with horror by the people of the borough as well as the citizens of the entire county, who, for the second time, will be called upon to pay the enormous amount of money entailed in the shape of riot losses.

The Result.

As far as can be ascertained 11 workmen and 9 detectives were killed and 18 workmen and 21 detectives injured in the battle. In addition to this at least 100 detectives were seriously injured by the strikers while on their way to the jail last evening.

The 300 Pinkerton men taken to Homestead to protect the mills of the Carnegie Steel company were not sworn in as deputy sheriffs. They were accompanied from this city by Deputy Sheriff Gray, who was supposed to have sworn the detectives, but he denied doing it. He said that he had no authority himself to take such action, and that Sheriff McCleary had not authorized him to do so.

Serious Irregularities Charged to Police Justice Hutchinson.

CHELSEA, Mass., July 7.—Judge Eben Hutchinson of the Chelsea police court disappeared from his home in this city nine days ago, and it is alleged that he left financial irregularities amounting to many thousand dollars, and forgery is said to be among the charges that are formulated against him. Already the grievance committee of the Suffolk Bar association has considered his case, and unanimously voted to report the expediency of his disbarment.

Judge Hutchinson has been for years one of the foremost citizens of Chelsea. He fulfilled the duties of magistrate in the local court honorably, and was looked up to as a man of integrity and profound legal knowledge. He had a distinguished military record, a varied political career, a high standing in society, and a family much beloved. Judge Hutchinson's liabilities are conservatively stated by those who profess to know to be not less than $50,000.

The committee of the Bar association before which he failed to appear when summoned a fortnight ago heard testimony that is said to have shown conclusively an appropriation to his own use of several thousand dollars left him for investment by clients in Boston, Dorchester and Chelsea. Irregularities in methods of conveying property are also alleged.

A BOSTON TRAGEDY.

Arrest of a Woman on Suspicion of Having Committed Murder.

BOSTON, July 2.—On Wednesday night there was a quarrel between a man and a woman in a house on Pitts street, and the next morning the police learned that the man was lying dead in the house. Medical Examiner Harris being out of town, another physician was called upon to decide whether the death was due to violence. He reported that excessive use of liquor was the cause. On the return of the medical examiner, however, a more careful examination was made, showing that the man had not only been drinking recently, but also that he had been assaulted so fiercely as to leave no doubt that his death was the result of this attack.

On receiving this information the police yesterday arrested all the inmates of the house. It is supposed that Mary Ann Fisher is the woman who took part in the quarrel. She is 50 years old. The other prisoners are held as witnesses. The dead man, William Ford, was 26 years old.

A FIEND IN HUMAN FORM

Keeps a Child in the Woods All Night and Assaults Her.

WARE, Mass., July 6.—Sadie, the 7-year-old daughter of James Stevenson of Gilbertville, while at play with companions Monday afternoon a short distance from home, was asked to ride by a strange man. She accepted, and was taken to Belchertown, near the Granby line, where she was left in the woods all night, and brutally outraged. The brute allowed her to go yesterday morning, and she made her way to a neighboring farm house. Officers are on the track of the ravisher, whom she can only describe as a large man with a red face and rough beard. The team was stolen from West Brookfield Monday noon.

AN OLD MAN MURDERED.

His Nephew Commits the Deed and Then Attempts Suicide.

GREAT BARRINGTON, Mass., July 6.—John De Leer, aged 60, was shot and killed by his nephew, Martin De Leer, aged 23, during a quarrel over money matters. Martin then attempted suicide, and was found lying on the bed with his jaw smashed in by a bullet, while John's body lay on the floor of the miserable hut occupied by the men in a pool of blood. Both men were charcoal burners, and had frequently quarreled. Martin will live.

Milliken Renominated.

WATERVILLE, Me., July 7.—Yesterday saw the fullest and most exciting convention ever held in Maine. Every city, town and plantation was represented in city hall when the crowd began to assemble, long before the hour set for the opening.

At 2:15 the balloting began, each county using a separate ballot box. At 3:02 the ballot closed and the committee retired. When the ballot was declared Howard Owen withdrew Mr. Manley's name. The first ballot resulted: Whole number, 381; Milliken, 160 1-2; Burleigh, 101 1-2; Wiswell, 86; scattering, 1.

Before a second ballot was half completed the workers knew that the contest was settled, as Manley's thirty-two delegates came up for Milliken. The second ballot: Whole number, 381; Milliken, 196 1-2; Burleigh, 100 1-2; Wiswell, 84.

Democrats Unseated.

PROVIDENCE, July 2.—Despite emphatic protests by the minority leaders in the legislature all of Newport's representatives were unseated on th elections committee's findings of fraudulent corruption and intimidating practises by the ward officers and Mayor Honey. An attempt was made to have another election, two Republican senators voting in favor, but the motion was defeated and the legislature adjourned to next January.

Berlo Lowers a Record.

HARTFORD, July 5.—P. J. Berlo, M. A. C., made a world's record here yesterday. In a trial against time he made a quarter of a mile in 28 4-5s., with a flying start. This performance knocks a full second off the record. Berlo was paced by Carl Hess, M. A. C. Allowing for the interference of a stiff wind up the back stretch, the heats were done in good time.

May Have Been Killed in a Fight.

BOSTON, July 6.—Medical Examiner Draper viewed the body of Thomas Russell of Brighton who was reported to have fallen down stairs and broken his neck, and decided that his death may have resulted from the effects of a fight that he was in. The doctor is to hold an autopsy on the body.

Crooked Letter Carrier Sentenced.

BOSTON, July 6.—George Napoleon Bonapart Thomas, a Boston letter carrier for twenty-four years, was arrested for embezzling letters and pleaded guilty. Judge Nelson sentenced him to five years at hard labor in the state prison.

Stanley's Failure.

LONDON, July 6.—Henry M. Stanley has been defeated as a candidate for parliament for North Lambeth in the Liberal-Unionist interest.

Cyrus Field Dying.

GRASS.

The rose is praised for its beaming face,
The lily for saintly whiteness;
We love this bloom for its languid grace,
And that for its airy lightness.

We say of the oak, "How grand of girth!"
Of the willow we say, "How slender!"
And yet to the soft grass, clothing earth,
How slight is the praise we render!

But the grass knows well in her secret heart
How we love her cool, green raiment,
So she plays in silence her lovely part
And cares not at all for payment.

Each year her buttercups nod and drowse,
With sun and dew brimming over;
Each year she pleases the greedy cows
With oceans of honeyed clover.

Each year on the earth's wide breast she waves,
From spring until stern November,
And then she remembers so many graves
That no one else will remember!

And while she serves us with gladness mute,
In return for such sweet dealings
We tread her carelessly under foot—
Yet we never wound her feelings!

—Edgar Fawcett.

Where Chameleons are Plentiful.

Almost as frequent as tortoises in some parts of Cape Colony, and quite as popular as domestic pets, are chameleons. A schoolboy on a holiday ramble would not find much difficulty in picking a chameleon off a bush did he know where to search for it. "Oh, I'll get you plenty of chameleons," say my young friends to me, not far from Port Elizabeth. On flowering shrubs they are most frequently found and in gardens. In a garden in Cape Town I one day gathered four off a pomegranate bush.

Two were full grown and of a brilliant iridescent green with reddish markings; one was only half grown and had not full colors; the fourth was a tiny scrap like some stout legged insect, and was so exactly the color of the stem of the bush on which it was resting that only the inequality and unevenness of the spray attracted my notice at first, when, looking closer, this mite was perceived. It did not change its tints rapidly and vividly like the others, but retained its pale, inconspicuous hue, excepting at night, when like the rest it turned "white," that is, extremely pale, the markings being then almost inconspicuous.—Cor. Forest and Stream.

Indian Soldiers.

"There is one feature of the United States army that few people are aware of," said an ex-army officer. "It isn't generally known that there is a company in the army composed entirely of Seminole Indians, and that they are maintained and supported by the government as a distinct and separate military organization. By reference to the army appropriation bill you will see that the appropriation for the Seminole company is a separate item, having nothing whatever to do with the general appropriation. This company has been in existence since 1861, did valiant service in the rebellion, and has been of incalculable value in frontier service since the war. I think the Seminole company is now stationed at Fort Clark, Texas. In my judgment its record answers the long mooted question as to the Indian's value as a soldier."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Coloring Birds with Pepper.

A well known German naturalist, Dr. Sauermann, has published a number of curious observations on the artificial coloration of canary birds fed with cayenne pepper. The plumage changes from yellow to red. The pepper contains an oily matter and an irritating principle, and when these are extracted by maceration the pepper loses its coloring property, but if olive oil be added to the macerated pepper its coloring property returns. Hence the oil is considered the vehicle of the color. White hens treated in the same way also become reddish, and the yolks of their eggs become a bright red.—New York Times.

Enemies of the Cobra.

Snake catchers in India manage to seize and handle the deadly cobras with astonishing ease and freedom. The most effective cobra catcher and killer, however, is perhaps the mongoose, which escapes being bitten by its wonderful activity. Sometimes it waits till the cobra darts at it, when it suddenly pounces on the snake's head and crunches it.—Quarterly Review.

A Long List.

Miss De Thumpp—What shall I play?

Hostess—Play your favorite.

Miss De Thumpp—Every piece I know is a favorite.

Hostess—Then—er—play something else.—New York Weekly.

Artists are often accused of conceit, but some of the greatest of them have been beautifully modest. Corot asked his friends to retouch his pictures. Watteau sometimes drove his friends to despair by destroying work which they thought above criticism.

A wire rope has been manufactured at Cardiff, Wales, which is believed to be the longest and largest in the world. It is 2,400 fathoms in length, which would make it two miles and 108 yards long, taking our measurement as a standard.

Dramatists in France get 12 per cent. of the gross receipts of each play, and are allowed tickets to the value of 100 francs for every performance of such plays as they have written.

BARBER AND DENTIST.

The Shrewd Knight of the Razor Wanted an Advertisement.

Dr. Wills, an English resident of Persia, was talking with the barber who had come as usual to shave and shampoo him. "Why not do me the honor to come just over to my shop?" said the barber. "It would do you harm," answered Dr. Wills, "if the people were to know that you shaved an unbeliever." "Not a bit of it, sahib. I would shave the evil one himself if he were only open handed; and I should be respected for it, particularly if"—with a chuckle—"I kept tight hold of his nose."

Hassan, the barber, had tight hold of the Englishman's nose at that moment, and as he was just going over the region above Adam's apple with his keen razor there was no replying to his joke.

"You should see me draw teeth—such teeth!" added the barber. "You, doctor, who only draw the teeth of princes and gentry, you have never seen such teeth, even in a dream." Here he drew his fingers, dipped in water over his client's chin—they do not lather in the east—and added with unction, "Such teeth—teeth with five roots!"

Dr. Wills could not remonstrate, for Hassan had him by the nose again, and his razor was still playing in dangerous places. The conversation ended by the Englishman's promising to visit the barber at his shop.

Hassan had no sooner gathered up his traps and retired with dignity than the servant of Dr. Wills began to expostulate.

"You won't go, sir, of course," he began, as he handed his master a towel.

"Won't go! Indeed I shall. Why not, pray?"

"Ah, you sahibs are always taken in. Don't you see, sahib, why he wants you to come? He will say you have come to learn from him."

The Englishman was amused, and at the time appointed he went to Hassan's shop, and was received with exuberant welcome.

"Your footsteps are on my eyes; you are indeed welcome; you honor my poor establishment."

The place was "clean as a new pin." Vases of the Narcissus poeticus filled it with fragrance, and customers were plentiful.

Heads were shaved; arms were bled; a rheumatic sufferer lay down and received three severe burns with a hot iron, for which he seemed duly grateful; and finally Hassan "actually extracted a part of a tooth—in three acts and a prologue, with an interval of five minutes after each."

At the end a large piece came away.

"Ah," said the triumphant barber, "that was where the pain was!" And the patient went out with his cheek in his hand.

Dr. Wills soon followed, but was hardly in his own courtyard before his servant entered, pale with rage.

"Sahib! Oh, sahib!" he began. "I said it! I knew it! He has done it; I knew he would! There he stands, the rascal, explaining to the two merchants, your patients, that you—ah, that I should live to see the day!—that you have come to him at your own request to take a lesson in tooth drawing!"—Youth's Companion.

Knew His Business.

The clothing man had printed a big advertisement, and he was honest and had much business. A facetious customer came in.

"I like this," he said, sticking out a copy of the paper containing the ad.

"What's the matter with it?" asked the clothier.

"You say here, 'A good boy's coat for fifty cents.' Can't a bad boy get a coat for fifty cents too?"

"Yes," said the clothier politely.

"Then why not make the advertisement to read 'a boy's good coat for fifty cents?'" and the customer laughed the laugh of a man who always has everything just right.

The clothier was as serene and gentle as the gospel of truth and light.

"Because," he said, "I meant it the way I put it. We can't sell a boy's good coat for fifty cents. We can and do sell a good boy's coat for fifty cents, and if a bad boy wants one of that kind he can have it exactly at the same price. See?"

Then the facetious customer put the paper in his pocket and took one of the coats home to his boy.—Detroit Free Press.

Oil as an Insulator.

The value of oil as an electric insulator, which has been supposed to have been well proved by practical tests in this country and in Germany, is now placed somewhat in doubt by experiments conducted by Professor Elihu Thomson, the results of whose experiments seem to show that alternating currents of moderate potentials and low periodicities will cause puncture over much longer distances under oil than occur with very high period current discharges.—New York World.

At the Steamship Docks.

Among the striking sights of New York are those to be seen at the docks. It is as interesting to look at a steamship load of Americans bound for Europe as to look at a steamship load of European immigrants coming into port. The outward bound Americans are apt to be less picturesque in their garb than the incoming foreigners.—New York Sun.

Fire destroys the Barker Homestead.

To mar what had been considered a delightful Fourth of July day, flames made their appearance near the eaves just above the front door of the Barker homestead, Monday evening, about 5 o'clock, and in a comparatively short time the comfortable and pleasantly situated farm-house of Mr. Jacob Barker was in ruins. From what the fire originated can only be surmised, as the owners of the property can assign no direct cause, whether it was from inflammable material within the house or from sparks from the outside it is difficult to decide. The fire was discovered by Miss Mary Nason, a relative of the family, who alarmed the occupants, then hastened promptly to secure aid from the Fire Department. In the meantime investigation revealed the fact that the fire had made rapid headway in the attic and the place was doomed.

The residents of the vicinity were aroused and gave timely assistance in removing some of the articles of furniture from the dwelling, although those above the second floor could not be reached. All efforts to save the house proved unsuccessful, and as soon as the enginemen arrived attention was directed to saving the barn. To prevent the spreading of the fire it was deemed advisable to tear down an intervening shed. As there was little water on or near to the premises the machine was practically valueless in saving property although considering the distance travelled it took but little time. Insured in the Merrimack Mutual of Andover for $1000 and the Traders and Mechanics of Lowell for $1000. The furniture was also insured for $500, $250 in each of the companies.

Helping Hand Fair.

The fine weather of Wednesday was conducive to a good attendance at the Helping Hand Fair in Stevens Hall. The hall itself with its tasteful decorations of flowers and bunting made a pretty picture. The first attraction which met the eye was the flower booth, tastefully draped in white, with red intermingled, which with the foliage and blossoms of potted and cut flowers made a very striking and handsome feature of the fair; this being presided over by Miss Olive A. Rea assisted by Mrs. Harry Clark. Beyond the flower booth, directly in front of the stage, was the fancy table, with at most beautiful assortment of articles, which judging by the amount of money taken must have found a ready sale. Miss King, Miss Phillips and Miss Virginia Stevens had charge of it. The stage, very handsomely decorated with portieres, screens, rugs and tropical plants, was used for afternoon tea, the matrons of honor being Mrs. M. T. Stevens, Mrs. Willard P. Phillips and Mrs. Charles Noyes, assisted by Mrs. S. D. Stevens, and Miss Helen Stevens. On the right of the hall was the "circulating library" under the care of Miss Kate Stevens, and the fruit, confectionery and peanut table, a very inviting feature, was n the care of Mrs. J. H. Rea, Mrs. Geo. L. Weil and Miss Lizzie Ingalls, and was amply patronized. Beyond that was the variety table of which Miss Gertrude H. Hannaford was the director. On the left was the domestic table, with a fine display of all kinds of useful articles in charge of Mrs. Osgood, Miss Kate Johnson, and Miss Dora Ellis. The ice cream tent with its pointed decorations of white bunting and flowers was a very handsome and elaborate arrangement. Mrs. Ralph Blake, Miss Lois Blunt and Misses Minnie Foster and Mary Prescott served the ice cream and cake. It was a very successful affair. Page & Co., of Lawrence, catered for the occasion.

Pronounced Hopeless, yet Saved.

From a letter written by Mrs Ada E. Hurd, of Groton, S.D., we quote: "Was taken with a bad cold, which settled on my Lungs, cough set in and finally terminated in Consumption. Four doctors gave me up saying I could live but a short time. I gave myself up to my Saviour, determined if I could not stay with my friends on earth I would my absent ones above. My husband was advised to get D. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and colds I geve it a trial took in all, eight bottles; it has cured me, and thank God I am now a well and hearty woman." Trial bottles free at Arthur Bliss' and H. M. Whitney's Lawrence. Large bottles 50c. and $1.00.

LAWRENCE.

The Republican city committee has arranged for several rallies as follows: Sept 19 with W. W. Crapo as the principal speaker, Oct. 10 with Hon. Fred T. Greenhalge, and Oct. 21 with Hon. Henry Cabot Lodge. It is also expected that rallies will be held Nov. 7, the night before election, in both the city hall and opera house.

The corporations in this city have adopted the 58 hour system. The only change is that they begin work at 6.30, instead of 6.10, in the morning. It is said that with this reduction in hours of labor comes a reduction in wages.

It is pretty certain that Lawrence will have a new industry, A. B. Priest, a Haverhill shoe manufacturer, having been looking for a site. It will be a stock company with several local men interested, and it will manufacture shoes and slippers.

A German butcher hung a flag out last Saturday union down and there came near being a riot. The police arrived just in time to prevent trouble.

The Sunday Telegram is now being issued from new quarters in the wooden building in the rear of the Post Office.

The iron foundry of E. Davis & Son has been purchased by James F. Lanigan who has been foreman for years.

Quite an important change has occurred in Lawrence banking circles, the Pemberton bank having been purchased by the Arlington. The controlling interest in the Pemberton was acquired by certain directors of the Arlington buying from W. S. Jewett his entire stock. The change will probably not take place until about Sept. 1 when the name Pemberton will be dropped and the entire business conducted under the name of the Arlington. It is said that there has been trouble in the board of directors of the Pemberton in regard to the president's management.
